

HELP TELL AMWAY'S STORY!

Each day, the Historical Archives & Museum values the significance of historical importance. Of course, not everything is worth saving, but it is our job in determining what will help tell the Amway story now and for future generations.

Amway's Historical Archives & Museum is dedicated to preserving the integrity of Amway's heritage. Throughout time, historical information is created and can be lost. Remember, as Amway employees and independent business owners, we all can contribute to the restoration and preservation of Amway's History.

WHAT WE PRESERVE AND ARE ALWAYS LOOKING FOR MORE OF...

Architectural drawings
Budgets
Correspondence Letters
Diaries
Films
Multimedia
Museum Objects

Newspaper clippings
Oral Histories & Speeches
Photographs
Posters
Published Literature Brochures
Reports
Sketches

OUR COLLECTION IS NEVER COMPLETE

The Historical Archives & Museum is charged with preserving that story through letters, reports, publications, photographs, news clippings, speeches, and interviews with key employees. You can also find an organized collection of museum materials such as product containers, event items, awards, and other physical objects that have been part of the story of Amway, its co-founders, employees, and independent business owners.

OUR MISSION

The ongoing challenge of the Historical Archives & Museum is to continually identify and obtain records and objects being created or used today that will have informational value tomorrow.

BENEFITING THE FUTURE

Amway's corporate identity is one of proud heritage and a unique business opportunity. Our history is a living part of us – it defines who we are and where we are going.
