From the Chair: Austin and Beyond

By Gwynedd Cannan

May this letter find all members busily planning for the SAA conference in beautiful, sun-bathed, downtown Austin this August. The ARCS reception will be held on Wednesday evening, August 12, from 5:30 to 7:30, hosted by Mark Duffy and the Episcopal Archives. The location is a few short blocks from the hotel and offers the perfect opportunity to meet and greet your colleagues from far-flung posts. The annual meeting will be held on Thursday, August 13th from 1:30 to 3:30. Come to the meeting with your ideas and questions. We are hoping to have time to open it up to the floor and we want to hear from you. After the business meeting, members will discuss their web-based cataloging systems and digital archives including the issues they encountered and solutions they devised.

Though we usually have everyone fill out a Member Survey Form at the Annual Meeting, we are trying something different this year. The Member Survey will be posted on the ARCS website and we invite all members, whether you are able to attend the SAA Conference or not, to fill it out. A Steering Committee Manual has been posted on the ARCS website under “Governance.” Take a look to get an idea of what is expected from the various offices. The manual explains the basic requirements and provides an idea of how one can work ARCS into one’s busy schedule. It leaves plenty of room for innovative ideas and bold proposals, if desired. Look over the manual, look over the Member Survey, and nominate yourself or a friend for a place on the ARCS Steering Committee.

We will continue to post information regarding the Conference on the ARCS website. Be sure to check it regularly. I’m looking forward to seeing you in Austin. The best reason for going? I’ll be handing the gavel over to Alan Lefever. You’ll want to be there to cheer him on!

Virtual Tour: Archdiocese of St. Louis Archives

By Audrey P. Newcomer, CA

1. What is the mission of your Archives? The Archives of the Archdiocese of St. Louis provides a professional repository that identifies and collects, organizes and preserves, and provides access to all historically and canonically significant, non-current documents, artifacts and other works of enduring value pertaining to the operation of the Archdiocese, its
2. How many people work or volunteer in your repository? We have a staff of three in the Archives Office: the director, an archives assistant, and a part time secretary. We have one regular volunteer.

3. Describe your repository: The Archives is the official repository for the records of the Archdiocese of St. Louis and serves as the memory of the established Catholic Church in this area. We are centrally located in the Cardinal Rigali Center, the former site of Kenrick Seminary (photo 1) where thousands of priests received their formation from 1913 until 1987. Our building houses most of the agencies and departments of the Archdiocese and is located eight miles from the Cathedral and the offices of the Archbishop and Chancellor.

The Archives occupies 6695 square feet on the ground floor and lower level of the building next to the staff entrance. Archival materials on both levels (photo 2 and photo 3) are housed in closed stacks in a climate controlled environment with an HVAC system which monitors the temperature and humidity and a fire suppression system (photo 4). The reading room (photo 5) contains secondary reference materials and a large table for researchers. It is located adjacent to the closed stacks and the director’s office. A second research table near the microfilm reader has been added just outside the research room to accommodate multiple visitors. The archives assistant and volunteer have cubicles in a staff corridor. The secretary is positioned near the front door (photo 6) just beyond two exhibit cases. We have a separate processing room near the front door. An additional exhibit area maintained by the Archives is the Rosati Museum (photo 7) located on the first floor of the building near the main entrance.

4. Describe the holdings of your repository: The collections of the Archives hold 3885 linear feet of material and dates back to the establishment in 1826 of St. Louis as a Diocese when the Most Reverend Joseph Rosati was appointed its first bishop and the Most Reverend Louis W. V. DuBourg, bishop of Louisiana from 1817 to 1820, maintained both New Orleans and St. Louis as See cities.

While largely standard paper-based, the collection also contains 1250 sacramental registers of 102 closed parishes, 160 large pictures/photographs, 36 feet of negatives, 500 audiovisual items, 652 rolls of microfilm, architectural drawings, computer discs and ephemera. The collection is organized by record groups containing the permanent archives of the bishops, curia, agencies, departments, organizations and history. Approximately 92% of the collection is in print. Inactive tribunal, adoption, education, and building and real estate records are stored on the lower level.
5. Who uses you repository? The Archbishop, chancery and all offices and agencies of the Archdiocese and outside legal counsel use the Archives to obtain information necessary to fulfill their responsibilities. Parish staff preparing for historic celebrations or seeking assistance with annotating or finding sacramental records consult the archives. Individuals access the archives for records from closed parishes, or conducting historical or genealogical research. We received a total of 3439 requests by phone, email, postal mail, and the web. The majority of requests are submitted on forms from our webpage. We had 74 external visitors during FY 2008.

6. Are there any interesting projects that you are currently undertaking? We have been placing photographs and brief descriptions of the closed parishes on our webpage at http://www.archstl.org/archives using JOOMLA and hope to have a full complement of entries by the close of the fiscal year. We will also be implementing the TRIM electronic records management system over the course of the next three years. We are inputting retention schedules and look forward to being able to more easily accommodate the receipt of electronic documents.

7. Are there particular collections or aspects of your repository you want to highlight? Our early bishop collection helps to depict the history of the Church in the US during its initial development and is frequently consulted by historical researchers. We have an extensive sacramental register collection (photo 8) from which we produced 1221 certificates and 1532 annotations in FY2008. We have the negatives and associated copyright of St. Louis photographer, Richard Finke.

Models and Resources Re-visited
By Chris Doan, Archivist, Sisters of the Presentation, San Francisco
May 12, 2009

The Models and Resources section of the ARCS website features a wide breadth of coverage both in terms of the kinds of religious archives represented and the types of resources that are offered.

A quick look around and you will notice there is something for everyone. If you are in the beginning stages of organizing your institution’s archives, the Southern Baptist Historical Library and Archives offers on their website an article series about how to preserve local church records and historical materials. If it’s time to update (or create) your archive’s disaster plan, the excellent resources listed on the ARCS Preservation and Disaster Planning webpage is a good starting point to begin your research.

Just like the old saying goes, “Why try and re-invent the wheel?” Our colleagues’ hard work is just a few clicks away for your own reference and inspiration. I encourage you to bookmark a few of these excellent resources in your social book-marking system for quick and easy access. You will be pleased to know all the links are active and current.

If your archive has created a manual or developed guidelines, the Models and Resources Committee wants to hear from you! Institutions both large and small are welcome and encouraged to submit their own examples. I am currently seeking manuals and guides for procedures and processes used in developing the following areas:

- Digitization projects
- Creating online exhibits
- Preserving digital collections

Together, we can avoid re-inventing the wheel and instead help one another to get moving!
New Materials at the Billy Graham Center Archives
By robert.d.shuster@wheaton.edu

The following are updates on two examples of the new materials recently opened to researchers at the Billy Graham Center Archives at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill. For further information about any of the collections mentioned below, contact the Archives at bgcarc@wheaton.edu or 630-752-5910.

Collection 81: Records of Africa Inland Mission International
The BGC Archives opened the records of the nondenominational Protestant ministry Africa Inland Mission (AIM) to researchers thirty years ago in 1979. Ever since then, it has been one of the Archives most heavily used collections. In March of 2009, an additional 23 boxes of files from the United States branch of the mission were added to the collection, as well as films, videos, audio tapes and photographs. These documents, which cover the period from 1970 up to 2000, tell the story of the AIM in Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Congo, the Sudan, and other African countries, as was the Seychelles and the Comoros. The materials in this new addition illustrates a wide range of broad topics: the life of a Christian missionary; the activities of AIM and other missions in church planting, education, medicine, and development; the relationship of the mission with Africa Inland Church; the changes in and development of African Christianity in last half of the 20th century; and the political, social and economic history of the continent for the same period. The guide to the collection can be found online at: http://www.wheaton.edu/bgc/archives/GUIDES/081.htm.

Collection 525: Interviews of Alfredo Enrique Gutierrez
Alfredo Enrique Gutierrez was a Billy Graham Center Scholarship student from 1995-1997. He came having already been a pastor in several Christian & Missionary Alliance churches in Florida and Texas. Gutierrez was ordained a minister with the Christian and Missionary Alliance denomination after having accepted a call from God to minister among Spanish-speaking people in the United States. He especially wanted to reach youth for Christ and inspire them to become leaders and pastors. In his interviews he describes a wide range of topics including Cuban Christianity, influence of communism on his home life, immigrating to Miami, Fla., working alongside his family at Los Pinos Nuevos church in Miami, conversion after seeing transformation in his older brother’s life, ministering in Spanish speaking churches, Latin American church dynamics, likenesses of being pastor and missionary. Gutierrez’s interview is especially valuable for his descriptions of ministering in Spanish-speaking congregations of different Hispanic descents. The events described in the interview cover the time period, 1963-1995. The Alfredo Enrique Gutierrez interview guide is online at www.wheaton.edu/bgc/archives/GUIDES/525.htm.
