2	(1) Our "Virtual Conference" is a 3rd annual event, currently in July. Content is typically new -- not repeat sessions from AC. (2) Starting AC2013, we will digitally capture AC programs, subject to rights. Basic costs are included in AC registration (approx. $8/person in direct cost -- at ALA registration/program levels). Content will be freely available to all registrants and available for a reasonable fee to non-registrants.	2/5/2013 12:46 PM
3	This is much talked about, and may be attempted with select session from the 2013 conference, but has not yet been implemented. At least initially, the costs will be born by the organization via its GoToMeeting subscription (specific cost unknown to me.)	2/5/2013 8:02 AM

Q8 Is access to past meeting content available on your organization's website? If yes, in what forms, for how long, how far back, and with what costs to the organization and/or members. Please elaborate as necessary.

1	For about 3 years now videos of selected sessions (about 6 per meeting, out of about 40 presentations) have been offered through YouTube and Vimeo - free and open to anyone; so far we haven't removed any of them and have no plans to do so anytime soon. Professionally captured videos have been very expensive for us (several thousands of dollars) so we are experimenting with lower-budget screen capture options instead, using Camtasia software loaded on loaner laptops with an external microphone; CNI staff helps speakers capture their presentations and then process and upload the products onto CNI's video channels. Cost for this method is nominal, plus staff time. All meeting materials, including presentation abstracts, slides (when available) & handouts (when available) are available on CNI's website, free and open to anyone.	2/7/2013 6:40 AM
2	See above. Additionally, program organizers/speakers are encouraged to post handouts and other session-related notes to the ALA Scheduler, which is archived along with all uploaded materials.	2/5/2013 12:46 PM
3	Yes, past program information is maintained on the ogr website; copies of PowerPoint presentations are available on Slide Share (2-3 years history). No additional cost for this posting information.	2/5/2013 8:02 AM

1	We have been experimenting with offering more breakout rounds, and making some rounds only 45 minutes long (rather than an hour, as we've always had in the past). The reason for these changes is because we've been flooded with proposals in recent meetings and we've wanted to try to accept more good projects.	2/7/2013 6:40 AM
2	Shorter sessions, more "conversation" style sessions, short-form (e.g. Ignite!) sessions, increased integration with Scheduler. Call if you want to discuss further details.	2/5/2013 12:46 PM
3	Conference programming is managed by volunteer board members, and varies slightly year to year.	2/5/2013 8:02 AM
4	we recently made changes in the presentation format and conference schedule to enable more interaction between conference attendees. we encourage collaborative notetaking, unconference type sessions, and sessions that are active "problem solving session"	2/4/2013 7:37 AM
5	We are thinking of changes, but just at the start and have no idea where it will lead. Will not have first discussion about it till later in spring.	2/1/2013 4:08 PM
6	nothing to report at this time	2/1/2013 11:48 AM

9	shortening the time between proposal submissions and the actual conference; adding more interactive sessions (as opposed to panel presentations);	7/17/2012 8:33 AM
10	Intend to change from hotel venue to lower cost University/college style venue from 2012 in order to better manage conference budgets and ensure the conference is affordable for as many members as possible.	6/27/2012 10:57 PM

2	While our solo conferences have been successful in ways other than financial (that is they rarely break even) our financially successful conferences are joint conferences (e.g. VRA + ARLIS/NA). So while joint conferences are a tremendous logistical challenge, they can be rewarding.	2/5/2013 8:18 AM

4	Conferences provide a pivotal opportunity for members to physically meet, interact and learn together. The Regrettably the ASA canceled its 2011 conference due to financial issues which generated significant backlash from members. The annual conference is clearly a critical member benefit and should be preserved.	6/27/2012 11:11 PM

8	Our members appreciate interactive, open discussion sessions more than traditional panels built on the scholarly conference model. We're also having great success with monthly web conferences designed to help members and their staff keep in touch between meetings. These are offered free of charge, focus on a topic of high interest, and include time for discussion. We clearly have a much different business model than SAA (relatively tiny # of members and very different sources of revenue/expense), so not all will apply to SAA.	6/17/2012 5:45 PM
