Each quarter we completed a tour of a local archive, including: Denver Nature and Science Museum, Denver Public Library, and NARA-Broomfield. Along with these tours we created the “Archival Bites” which consists of students volunteering to give a 5-10 minute (or longer) presentation between classes on an archival topic of their choice. Many of the students participated and it was a great success and will be carried on this coming Fall 2015. Some of the topics included archival reference programs/software and student training techniques. We found that having these small tutorials exciting and fresh for the chapter. It was a way for students to present their interests and knowledge within the archive field, along with giving them a chance to practice presenting.
