Diversity initiatives

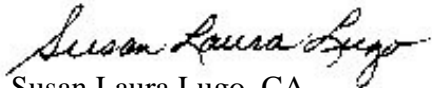

- As briefly discussed at the annual meeting on August 12, 2009, LACCHA was approached by SAA Director of Education Solveig DeSutter for recommendations for future workshops to address diversity issues and provide affordable training to introduce archival practice to non-archivist individuals. Former Senior Co-Chair Marisol Ramos' suggestion was to offer workshop materials and instruction in Spanish. The goal of making education resources available in other languages is to support local community groups in the preservation and creation of access to their records by providing archival science professional development opportunities to those who might serve those communities best. Status: LACCHA is awaiting feedback on its suggestions. Further progress will be monitored and reported on at the January 2010 Blog Meeting.

Questions/concerns for Council attention

None at this time.

Respectfully submitted,

Susan Laura Lugo, CA

SAA Roundtable Meetings II
Wednesday, August 12, 2009
3:15 P.M. - 5:15 P.M.

Annual Meeting
DRAFT

1) The second annual meeting of the SAA LACCHA Roundtable was convened in Austin, Texas, at the joint SAA/CoSA Conference on August 12, 2009, at 3:15 P.M. Approximately 25 persons attended the annual meeting session. Welcoming remarks were given by Senior Co-Chair Marisol Ramos, during which she stressed that the roundtable wants to increase the level of online communication activity in order to keep conversations going within LACCHA outside of annual meetings.

2) General announcements

a) Nancy Fortna, member of the 2010 SAA/NAGARA/CoSA Program Committee, spoke on the process for submitting presentation proposals for the joint 2010 Conference in Washington, D.C. - see <http://www.archivists.org/conference/>

- Need to submit a FULL proposal
- Could propose workshops as well
- Seeking applicants to program committee for SAA 2011 as well
- Junior Co-Chair Susan Lugo asked how many in attendance worked with government records – five (5) said they did.

b) Evelyn Frangakis, efrangakis@NYPL.org, New York Public Library, spoke on IMLS-funded preservation fellowship program operating between Yale and NYPL. Details should be on their websites soon (see the following Web sites: <http://jobs-nypl.icims.com/jobs/5618/job> ; http://www.ims.gov/news/2009/061709b_list.shtm (scroll to NY); <http://www.library.yale.edu/lhr/jobs/intern/IMLS2010fellowship.html>). Applications are being accepted for 2010 and September 14 is the deadline. E-mail for details. Current program ONLY open to U.S. citizens. Frangakis is also interested in getting reactions about a need for an international program. E-mail her if you are a not a U.S. citizen but would be interested in participating in such a preservation program at some point in the future.

c) Brian Peterson, Content Manager for Ancestry.com, talked about Ancestry's partnership with the Virgin Islands Social History Associates to provide access to the almost 2 million records of the St. Croix African Roots Project. He is interested in future collaborations with various Latin American/Caribbean groups around genealogical materials. Contributors of content get free access to Ancestry.com's databases for their repository.

d) Ramos, on behalf of T-Kay Sangwand, Human Rights Archivist at University of Texas, Austin, announced a proposal to form a Human Rights Roundtable and discussed the need to gather signatures to support this initiative.

e) Leon "Lee" Miller, ending his term as SAA Council Liaison to LACCHA, spoke on how thrilled Council was with LACCHA's progress. He also noted how requirements for roundtables had loosened, and they are now very autonomous in how they may self-govern. It was noted, however, that if LACCHA chooses to utilize electronic voting that it MUST be guided by organizational protocols established by SAA.

f) Deborra Richardson, Chair of the Archives Center at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, was introduced as LACCHA's incoming SAA Council Liaison, and spoke on SAA Council's diversity initiatives. She also asked LACCHA members to review SAA's Strategic Priorities (see http://www.archivists.org/governance/strategic_priorities.asp) and comment.

3) Guest Speaker Presentation Ramos introduced LACCHA's featured Guest Speaker for the annual meeting: Kent Norsworthy, Content Director for the Latin American Network Information Center (LANIC) <http://lanic.utexas.edu>. Norsworthy's presentation included many live shots of the LANIC Web site, with special emphasis on the Latin American Government Documents Archive Project, <http://lanic.utexas.edu/project/archives/lagda/>. Norsworthy also addressed the Archive-It turnkey program, part of the Internet Archive that drives this project. His presentation was both informative and engaging and well-received by all. Extending government documents archival principles to "archiving" the often fragile presence of Latin American government websites is just one important aspect of LANIC's impressive work.

4) Approval of Minutes of Annual Meeting of August 27, 2008 The Minutes of the annual meeting held August 27, 2008, were circulated for review and comment prior to the meeting via the LACCHA listserv. There being no changes or corrections, and upon motion duly made and seconded, the proposed minutes were unanimously approved as drafted.

5) Reports

a) Marisol Ramos (Outgoing Senior Co-Chair) made observations on the impact LACCHA has had during its first year as a roundtable, and expressed confidence that its impact will continue to grow.

b) Incoming Senior Co-Chair Susan Laura Lugo recognized and thanked Ramos for her service and initiative in establishing LACCHA. Lugo brought delicious “Mexican wedding” cookies to celebrate Ramos’ considerable achievements.

c) Newsletter Editor Noah Lenstra and Webmaster Beatrice Skokan each spoke on their work during the past year on the LACCHA newsletter “Memoria” and Web site, respectively. Lenstra asked that members consider submitting news notes and aggressively ask their colleagues to do the same. Members were also urged to share the LACCHA newsletter with their colleagues, both domestically and abroad.

d) ALA International Relations Roundtable Liaison, Claudia Holguin, submitted a written report on her LACCHA/IRRT liaison work over the past year, the many IRRT resources available and activities in progress, and the value of collaborating with IRRT.

e) Ramos, as Liaison to the Seminar on the Acquisitions of Latin American Library Materials (SALALM), reported on her participation in SALALM and how archivists may make themselves heard within this group.

6) Old Business

a) Membership – From 37 persons attending the first LACCHA meeting in 2008, the membership has grown to 84 members as of the annual meeting in 2009. Members were thanked for getting the word out about LACCHA, and encouraged to continue to do so.

b) Listserv – Both Ramos and Lugo suggested more active participation on the listserv and solicited feedback on what members want out of the listserv.

c) Sessions – Both LACCHA-sponsored sessions proposed for SAA 2009 were approved and Ramos and Lugo acknowledged what a remarkable achievement that was for a first year roundtable. Members were encouraged to continue their show of support for LACCHA by attending both sessions. Brief descriptions for each session appear on the agenda, as well as in the SAA Program booklets.

d) No other old business came before the meeting.

7) Membership Action Required

a) Patrick A. Stawski, Human Rights Archivist in the Rare Book, Manuscript, Special Collections Library of Duke University, was the sole candidate for co-chair for 2009-2011. Although he was unable to attend the annual meeting in Austin, he posted a statement on his candidacy and platform on the LACCHA listserv prior to the meeting. Stawski was elected by acclamation by all voting members present at the annual meeting. He will serve as Junior Co-Chair from 2009-2010, and as Senior Co-Chair during the 2010-2011 term. Lugo will serve as Senior Co-Chair for 2009-2010.

b) Proposed amendments to the LACCHA Handbook were circulated via the listserv and Web site for comment prior to the meeting. Discussion was invited concerning the proposed amendments. Lugo noted that earlier in the week SAA Council had adopted certain provisions which may or may not have impacted on the proposed document. A motion, duly seconded, was made to accept and approve the proposed amendments, subject however to final review by LACCHA leadership to confirm alignment with the latest Council guidelines for roundtables. The motion passed without objection.

9) New business

a) LANIC Portal Collaboration - Ramos reported that LACCHA desires to work more closely with LANIC in the future by engaging LACCHA members to submit Latin American and Caribbean collections/information resources for inclusion in the LANIC online database. Ramos and Lugo will be meeting with Norsworthy after the annual meeting to discuss collaboration opportunities in greater detail. Information will be shared via the listserv.

b) Archives in Distress – Ramos gave a brief report on this topic, particularly noting the recent challenges being faced by the government archives of Puerto Rico and Honduras. She emphasized that in the current economic downturn it is often ethnic archives that are the first to have their funds disappear. Ramos asked LACCHA members to consider how LACCHA can use its resources to advocate for such archives and to bring this issue to light. Ramos asked that this discussion on this topic actively continue on the listserv.

c) SAA Diversity Workshops – Ramos reported that an idea to offer some type of affordable training to introduce archival practice to non-archivist individuals that may not be able to afford an archival education is in the initial stages of exploration with SAA. Her suggestion to SAA Director of Education Solveig DeSutter included being able to offer material not only in English but Spanish and other languages. The goal is to support community groups in the preservation and creation of access to their records by providing archival science professional development opportunities to those who might serve those communities best. Ramos will continue to explore this topic and report on any progress. LACCHA members interested in assisting Ramos should contact Ramos at Marisol.Ramos@yahoo.com.

10) Next meeting will be on LACCHA's blog, during the week of October 25-31, 2009 (Archives Month!). See the listserv for more details.

There being no further business for consideration, the meeting was adjourned at 5:25 P.M.

Summary of LACCHA's 2009 SAA/CoSA Conference Panel Sessions

[Excerpted from a LACCHA Listserv posting "A Look Back at LACCHA's 2009 Panel Sessions (Part I)"]

The LACCHA-sponsored panel session "Brick by Bricolage: Sustaining Caribbean Archives in the 21st Century" was scheduled to take place on Friday, August 14, 2009, and was very well-attended, thanks to some outstanding speakers and compelling topics.

The session featured archivists and cultural heritage caregivers from the Caribbean in the professional roles of a museum director, government archivist and university archivist. Though differences in their collections and roles exist, nevertheless their experiences have yielded universal perspectives on constructing new paradigms for archives in the face of physical, cultural and economic barriers.

According to Dictionary.com the term "bricolage" refers to "a construction made of whatever materials are at hand; something created from a variety of available things." The title of this session makes specific reference to the need for Caribbean archives to re-cast and re-build themselves "brick by bricolage," embracing innovative solutions to surmount one or more of these barriers. The speakers addressed public-private partnerships, outreach strategies and the challenges of government and university collections in transition within the global context of the 21st century. Each gave real-world examples and discussed what might be the right tools and tactics to overcome a traditionally devalued documentary heritage.

On behalf of the entire roundtable, particular thanks go out to our esteemed panelists whose presentations both engaged and entertained the audience. Their contact information and presentation paper abstracts are given below:

Title: Sustainability of the Documentary Heritage of Trinidad and Tobago

Topic: Sustaining the documentary heritage of Trinidad and Tobago : Challenges and Development

Resume: My paper will focus on the sustainability and preservation of the Documentary Heritage of Trinidad and Tobago. I will give a brief history of the archives situation in Trinidad and Tobago and the challenges faced in trying to develop the National Archives of Trinidad and Tobago. I will highlight the control mechanisms or preventive mechanisms that the National Archives have in place to preserve its collections and what they are still trying to accomplish. The constraints that are experienced during this whole exercise will also be discussed. Since I have only recently taken up the position of University Archivist of the University of Trinidad and Tobago, I will end my presentation by giving a brief outline of my plans for the University's archives.

Title - National Archives of Trinidad and Tobago: Leapfrogging into the 21st Century

From an idea in 1903 to its existence today, the journey of the National Archives of Trinidad and Tobago (NATT) has always been a struggle against the tide. The new millennium has however brought with it a greater sense of urgency, reflected both in the modern user who needs instant gratification and the archivist who harbours, simultaneously, such fears as the death of a traditional storyteller and the unrecorded history of blogging. Balancing this dichotomy is one of the greatest challenges for the archives of the Caribbean. This paper will look at some of the innovative ways being used by the NATT to achieve this balance particularly in the context of the Government's initiatives for information management in its Vision 2020 Strategic Plan.

Abstract: "The Single Survivor of Disaster: the Turks and Caicos National Museum"

On September 7, 2008, the eye wall of hurricane Ike came across the islands of Grand Turk, in the Turks and Caicos Islands, as a category 5 hurricane with sustained winds of 165 miles per hour and tornadoes gusting to 265. Published reports estimated that between 80 and 90% of the buildings on Grand Turk sustained significant damage. Owing to planning and procedural operations, the Turks and Caicos National Museum sustained no loss to collections, artifacts, or archives. The storm made clear, however, that is at stake in the Turks and Caicos is the total loss of the private archival collections, which make up much of historical information that is left in the country.

The problem of sustaining archival collections is that the museum is a young institution and most collections in the Turks Islands are in private hands. One of the agendas of the museum is to educate on the importance of heritage preservation. But the importance of long-term preservation does not run very deep in the current culture of the islands. During the recent storm event, many private collections were damaged or lost. The importance of pre-storm planning and the development of sustainable partnerships, so that private collections can be protected during emergencies, is now at the forefront of the museum's agenda. Prior to the storm, the museum was working with two private owners of historical collections to get archival collections scanned and cataloged. The museum is using the latest disaster as an example of why more resources should be put behind these efforts. This paper will explore the museum's efforts to sustain private archival collections and will discuss the illusive "government archive" which is an at risk archival collection.

There was a lively question and answer period following the excellent presentations, and many audience members with Caribbean connections lingered to introduce themselves to the panelists after the session. Dr. Hitch, whose presentation included an appeal for archival assistance, reported a month later that he was amazed at the number of persons who have approached him with an interest in assisting him at the National Museum of the Turks and Caicos Islands. The most recent update: two project archival assistants are expected to be joining him some time before the end of this year!

Attached for your viewing pleasure as a PDF file are a couple of images from the session.

Join me again in thanking all of our panelists in the Brick by Bricolage session!

[Excerpted from a LACCHA Listserv posting "A Look Back at LACCHA's 2009 Panel Sessions (Part II)"]

The LACCHA-sponsored panel session "Lest We Forget! Lest We Forget! Challenges and Opportunities to Achieve Sustainability of Memory" took place on Saturday, August 15, 2009, and despite an early morning hour start time (8:00 A.M.!) the session was very well-attended. The speakers were both informative and engaging and most used live feeds to the Internet to demonstrate information resources and outreach techniques.

The session featured archivists and cultural heritage caregivers for collections of former colonial governments in the Caribbean as well as the colonial governments of Hawai'i. Session organizer, Marisol Ramos, brilliantly articulated the session's focus in her proposal: "As Rudyard Kipling warned in 'Recessional,' there is huge danger in forgetfulness. Archives in former colonies face the challenge to disentangle and rescue native and colonized voices that were smothered by the 'official' discourse, ignored or dispersed far from their place of origin."

The speaker's papers and presentations in this session not only identified these challenges but offered unique and viable solutions for providing access and preserving the memories of former colonies in the Caribbean and Hawaiian Islands showcasing how the Web may serve as a medium to inform as well as preserve memory and culture. Both local and global aspects were engaged and exemplified in international collaborations where both knowledge and technology are shared between archives and archivists regardless of national borders.

On behalf of the entire roundtable, congratulations and thanks go out to our well-respected panelists! Their participation enriched SAA's program and the resources and techniques they shared enlightened all of us! More information on the panelists and their presentations are given below:

Presentation Title: Sharing Cultural Resources/ Sharing Responsibility/ Sustaining Memory: The Alan Lomax Archive Project

Abstract:

Intellectual and intangible memories of cultures from around the world line many archives' shelves in the forms of sound recordings, still images, and moving images—all vibrant documents of cultural expression. The moniker of anthropologist and sociologist Michael F. Brown's influential book, Who Owns Native Culture?, rings true for archives today just as it has and does in museums throughout the world. Who does own culture? And, how should archives negotiate the ethical and legal rights issues associated with their collections, especially those of an ethnographic nature?

Although there is no clear solution to the above dilemma, this presentation will detail efforts at the Alan Lomax Archive (the Association for Cultural Equity) to develop, implement, and maintain projects that use the benefits of digital technology to repatriate ethnographic documentation.

Alan Lomax coined the term "cultural feedback," by which he meant reinforcing the world's diverse expressive traditions and aesthetic systems by a variety of means, including the basic method of returning documentation to the places, people, and cultures from whence it came. Advances in digital technology make it possible for repositories to work together both to safeguard intangible cultural heritage and to circulate it widely.

In 2005, the Alan Lomax Archive (the Association for Cultural Equity), in collaboration with the Center for Black Music Research at Columbia College in Chicago, began a program to donate high quality digital copies of sound recordings and photographs to regional cultural repositories in the Caribbean. These documentary materials, originally collected during a pan-Caribbean survey by late ethnomusicologist, Alan Lomax, represent one of the earliest comprehensive collections of field recordings from the Caribbean region.

This process of repatriation adds valuable primary information to archival collections in regional Caribbean repositories. Included in these relationships are stakeholders from local and national governments, historians, archival staff, and community members.

To date, the Association for Cultural Equity, in collaboration with the Center for Black Music Research has completed dissemination projects with the Nevis Historical and Conservation Society in Nevis & St. Kitts, Folk Research Centre in St. Lucia, and Mediatheque Caraibe in Guadeloupe.

Presentation Title: Preserving Hawaii's Many Cultures Through Five Governments

Abstract:

How do you preserve the memories of an orally-based native culture who have been ruled by five distinct governments? Add to this challenge the diversity of immigrants who have significantly impacted the cultural fabric of the islands? Since Western discovery in the 1778 the Hawaiian Islands have been governed by a monarchy, provisional, republic, territory, and state. Like Native Americans, Native Hawaiians maintain cultural protocols regarding the preservation and access to their cultural memories. There is no consortia to preserve or present the multitude of collections which hold their and the cultural memories of other ethnicities in Hawaiian. How do the archival professionals address these challenges in deciding selection, acquisition, arranging, and access to our diverse cultural past?

Presentation Title: The Digital Library of the Caribbean: A Collaborative Model for Preservation, Sustainability, and Cultural Memory

Abstract:

Since its inception in 2005, the Digital Library of the Caribbean (dLOC) has served as a repository for unique materials housed in the archives, libraries and other institutions of the Caribbean and circum-Caribbean. US partner efforts in building a technical infrastructure and providing training make it possible for partner institutions in Haiti, Jamaica, Guyana, the Dominican Republic, the US Virgin Islands, and other areas to build and maintain virtual collections. At the same time, dLOC faces other challenges in terms of future planning, ongoing partner participation, and technical upgrades.

Session Abstract: Archives and libraries around the world increasingly enter into collaborative digitization projects to effectively manage the resources required to launch, share and preserve digitized versions of primary sources. However, an ethics for how these collaborative arrangements should function has yet to emerge. This panel will explore the ethical, legal and practical issues archivists confront when participating in or considering transnational collaborative digitization projects.

SESSION C

Session Title: Minding the Information Gap: Research Outreach Programs in Caribbean Government Archives

Session Abstract: The Caribbean's fragmented colonial history has fostered an information gap in government archives. Researchers seeking to document local history perspectives must fill this gap with narratives and commentary expressed in native voices but there are access and knowledge barriers to conducting complex research using primary documents. Archivists from three Caribbean nations reveal successful strategies for "minding the gap," showcasing creative outreach programs to generate increased interest in and local use of government archives by researchers.

SESSION D

Session Title: Insular Records for the Unincorporated: Archiving the Historical Record of U.S. Territories

Session Abstract: Ownership, custodianship, care and access issues are core considerations for territorial recordkeepers of the U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, and the former Panama Canal Zone. Strategically located in regions of acute political interest, these possessions have a subsumed cultural patrimony that is undervalued and underutilized by researchers and often ignored by officials. Federal, territorial, and cultural heritage professionals share the unique and often daunting challenges of locating, identifying and managing archival records of U.S. Territories.
